Lebanon Truce Fraying Amid New Shelling

By William Claiborne Washington Post Service

BEIRUT — The Lebanese gov ernment said Monday it had be-come bogged down with "new difficulties" in arranging a national reconciliation conference as the eight-day cease-fire continued to fray at the edges with shelling in first time since the accord.

U.S. marines positioned near Beirut's airport were driven into their bunkers when mortar and small arms fire hit Lebanese Army positions nearby. Mortars and rocket-propelled greoades were fired in the suburbs between Christian and Shiite neighborhoods.

The shelling intensified fears that delays in arranging reconciliation talks and deploying international cease-fire observers might unravel the fragile truce. [A security committee of the army and militias later arranged a cease-fire in the southern suburbs, and all of Beirut was reported quiet Monday night, Reuters reported

Following an emergency cabinet meeting to discuss Druze insur-gents in central Lebanon, a govern-ment statement said that President Amin Gemayel had told ministers that oo date had been set for a reconciliatioo conference of warring factions because of "new difficulties that arose from the need to choose a new venue."
While Mr. Gemayel had indicat-

New York Times Service MOSCOW - Shortly before 9 A.M. on June 17, Dennis G. Skirmer, a 54-year-old British banker, was found dead after a fall to the sidewalk from his 12th-story apartment on Moscow's Leninsky Prospekt.

Accounts of the incident that circulated in the British community here at the time suggested it was a snicide, possibly related to loneliness and depression brought on by 15 years' work in Moscow. But Sunday, a British couple living here disclosed to reporters that two days before his death Mr. Skinner approached them with a note that said he knew of a spy for the Soviet Union in the British Embassy and that his life was in danger. Mr. Skinner, who was the chief representative of the Midland Bank, one of Botain's largest financial institutions, precipitated the events that are now under investigation on the afternoon of June 15, when he arrived in a distraught state at the apartment of the Canes, a British couple

Arrangements were made for him to spend the night with another member of the embassy staff, and he returned to the embassy the following morning for further talks with Mr. Ratford and Mr. Burnett.

According to an embassy source, the two officials suggested that he move up the date of his departure from Moscow on vacation, scheduled for June 20, but Mr. Skinner said that he thought it better oot to arouse Soviet suspicions by changing his plans. The banker's death followed within 24

His friends claim that a number of factors militate against the theory that Mr. Skinner was depressed and took his own life. They note that he had a ticket for his Moscow-London flight on June 20 and that he had spoken eagerly of his coming vacation with his Russian-born wife and

In Sind, Landowners and Peasants Unite Against Zia's Rule

By William J. Eaton Los Angeles Times Service

HALA, Pakistan - In the blistering hot back country of turbulent Sind province, the spirit of resistance to the martial-law regime of President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq seems to be as tough and hardy as desert

Only a few miles north of Hala, the worst outbreak of violence since protests against General Zia began in mid-August occurred last week when government troops opened fire on demonstrators blocking the main highway.

The government acknowledged eight dead, including a Pakistani Army officer and seven civilians. Privately, however, one official said that the death toll was at least 18, and opposition sources put the number

British Labor Party Drops EC Plank

BRIGHTON, England (AP) - Britain's Labor Party, blaming itself for its June election trouncing, voted Monday to drop its insistence on withdrawal from the European Community, a key plank in its platform.

The move was an early victory for the party's new leader, Neil Labor's "last hope" of revival. The conference also voted to uphold the expulsion of five leaders of a pro-Marxist pressure group called the Militant Tendency. China Says U.K. Warns on Hong Kong BELIING (AP) — The Chinese news agency Monday accused a British official of threatening "turbulence" in Hong Kong if talks on the colony's future are unsuccessful.

It said that in a news conference in Hong Kong last Wednesday, Richard Luce Britain's minister for the colony's affairs, "made a threat" by saying that if the Chinese-British talks failed to find a successful solution, "there will be turbulence, there will be buffeting."

China has said it intends to reassert its sovereignty over Hong Kong in 1997, when Britain's lease on the New Territories, more than 90 percent of the colony's land area, expires. Britain and China have been holding talks on how to maintain Hong Kong's prosperity and stability. The next round of talks is scheduled for Oct. 19-20 in Beijing.

U.S. High Court Backs Anti-Gun Law

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. Supreme Court left intact on Monday rulings that citizens have no constitutional right to keep a handgun in the home, pleasing gun-control advocates and possibly opening the way for more local gun laws in the United States.

The justices, without comment, rejected challenges to a Morton Grove, Illinois, ordinance outlawing the possession of handguns. A federal trial judge, later supported by the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, ruled that the ban on "any handgun unless the same has been rendered permanently inoperative" does not violate the Constitution.

The original decision relied heavily on a 1939 Supreme Court ruling interpreted as meaning that the Second Amendment right to "keep and bear arms" extends only to those weapons a militia might need. The appeals court said it did not even have to reach that conclusion, however, because the amendment is not a limitation on the powers of state or local governments - only on Congress.

New York Times Service AMMAN, Jordan - Jordan is prepared to hold new discussions with Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, to work out a common approach toward a Middle East settlement, but only under certain conditions, according to Arab and Western diplomats.

Jordan's most detailed condition, they said, was that any efforts pick up essentially where they left off in April, when talks on a common Jordanian-PLO approach toward Arab-Israeli negotiations broke down. The government here has made no formal statement on the matter and has been reluctant to discuss it in recent months.

The main basis for the contacts last spring was President Ronald Reagan's Middle East proposal of last year and the plan framed at a meeting of Arab leaders in September 1982 in Fez, Morocco, diplo-The Arab and Western diplo-

In the short run, the White House views the AFL-CIO endorsement as primarily of impor-tance to Mr. Mondale's bid for the Democratic communication. White House officials have said they believe that Mr. Mondale is less threatening to Mr. Reagan than Senator John Glenn of Ohio.

In the long run, Mr. Reagan's leading political aides agree that he must compete with the Democratic nominee for the attention of bluecollar workers who beloog to unions, as well as those who do not. One Reagan tactic has been to court unions not affiliated with the AFL-CIO, such as the Teamsters on, which endorsed Mr. Reagan in 1980 and probably will again. The Teamsters president, Jackie Presser, has been in regular contact with White House and administration officials about the campaign. The White House hopes to pull together a dozen or more union dorsements, among them that of the International Longshoremen's Association, one official said.

Another possible Reagan tactic ill be to exploit disenchantment ithin the AFL-CIO concerning the federation's endorsement of Mr. Mondale, Some administration officials think that Mr. Reagan should court union local leaders. for example, who disagree with the Mondale choice.

Women working full time last year had median annual earnings of $13,014, as against a median of $21,077 for men, the bureau reported. Despite steady growth in the number of working women over the last two decades, the ratio of women's earnings to men's earnings remained relatively stable, in the range of 57 percent to 60 percent, until last year.

Labor Department economists said they regarded the rise to 62 percent as significant. In the last three years, they added, the earnings difference had narrowed more rapidly for younger than for older women. "In 1982," the department said, "women 16 to 24 years old earned 82 percent as "We can start talking about the union-bought candidate," the official said, adding that this message can be carried forward by Reagan surrogates if not by the president

This plays oo public opinion surveys showing voters are suspicious of a labor endorsement. For example. a Penn-Schoen poll for The Garth Analysis last December showed that 56 percent of those questioned viewed a labor endorsement in 1983 as "an unfair attempt by the unions to influence the outcome of the elections," while 25 percent thought it was "a good at-tempt to unify labor support behind one candidate," according to Public Opinion magazine.

It is an article of faith among Mr. Reagan's campaign advisers that union members, and blue-collar voters generally, are influenced most heavily by the same factors as most middle-income Americans, including those with white-collar jobs. These include traditional values of family, neighborhood and a strong national defense, as well as issues such as jobs and inflation.

"They are taxpayers, they are homeowners, and those things are mportant to them," a Republican strategist said.

Mr. Reagan always performs better among nonumon blue-collar workers than among their union-ized counterparts. He played economic themes to both in 1980, promising prosperity without pain and reminding them of his days as president of the Screen Actors Guild.

Recently Mr. Speakes was asked about a newspaper article that quoted an administration official to the effect that the United States had acted illegally in barring Andrei A. Gromyko, the Soviet foreign minister, from landing at U.S. commercial airports. Did Mr. Reagan disagree? "Absolutely," Mr. Speakes said, "Find who he is and we'll see how long he lasts." That flip comment was underent by the broad grin and aw-shucks manner that Mr. Speakes uses to defuse tensions. He managed to sting himself recently, however, when he tried it in discussing Barbara Honegger, a Justice Department consultant who resigned after assailing the administratioo's record oo women's rights.

In a comment he oow regrets,

Mr. Speakes heaped ridicule on her for having "played an important role" in the administration as the bunny in the White House Easteregg roll. A senior adviser to Mr. eagan called the remark "colossally stupid."

The publicity was itself a sign of Mr. Speakes's oew prominence, if an unwelcome one. Another indication came last month when be More significant, Mr. Speakes's office added two new deputies, Leslie Janka and Marlin Fitzwater. They join Peter H. Roussel, another deputy, and C. Anson Franklin. an assistant press secretary.

Speakes's access is not complete. Unlike most of his predecessors, he is barred from National Security Council meetings. He makes up for this with briefings from the council staff members.

In recent weeks, Mr. Speakes has also begun attending meetings of the Legislative Strategy Group, the key decision-making entity for domestic affairs. Three or four times a week, he reviews a list of issues with Mr. Reason. Sometimes the president's replies are blunt, and it is up to Mr. Speakes to provide the shadings. "If I had been with Ronald Reagan for 10 years before this job,"

Mr. Speakes said, "maybe I could have stepped in and reflected his views right away. But it takes time to develop a relationship. I think oow there's a recognition that if I'm editor of the Berliner Morgenpost given the information, I can handle it in a reliable way.

U.S. Groups Seek Curbs On Cable TV Programs

By Sally Bedell Smith New York Times Service

NEW YORK -- A nationwide battle is taking shape over sexually explicit programs on cable televi-

In a growing oumber of commu-nities, politicians and citizeus' groups are trying to curb such programs, primarily by enacting laws setting new standards for decency on cable television. Cable operators are fighting back in court, contending that these restraints amount to censorship. In several cities, judges have struck down these new laws as un-constitutional, and further legal confrontations are looming. The efforts to limit so-called indecency on cable stations have increased with the proliferation of programs that offer far more nudity, simulated sexual activity and profanity than have ever been seen on U.S. television.

Unlike conventional television, which is restrained by broadcasting standards, or movie theaters that, through a ratings system, theoreti-cally can exclude minors from seeing sexually explicit films, cable television can bring such programs into the home unchecked.

Subscribing to a cable television service is a voluntary act, but now that cable is reaching nearly 40 per-cent of the nation's 83.8 million television households, the prospect that children may view this kind of programming has provoked special concern. Legislators in more than a dozen states have drafted laws to restrain cable television. Legislation in several state legis-latures, including those in New York and California, would require cable operators to offer devices that can be attached to a television set to block out certain channels.

The legal battle precipitated by these legislative actions has turned on the question of whether the attempt to limit the sexual content of cable systems is censorship or legitimate regulation. Cable operators maintain that

The World and Africa

At the World Bank's annual meeting last week, its president, A.W. Clausen, chided his shareholders — the world's governments — for their hesitations. The world, and in particular the World Bank, knows a lot about successful techniques for raising standards of living in the Third World. "What is lacking," Mr. Clansen said, "is a firm commitment on the part of the international community to act while the window of conortunity is still open to us."

There is a division of labor between the World Bank and its oeighbor across 19th Street NW, the International Monetary Fund. The IMF deals with countries' short-term troubles with foreign payments. The World Bank is mainly concerned with economic growth in the longer term. At their joint meetings in Washington, most of the concern was devoted to the IMF because of the anxiety over Latin American debts. But the World Bank correctly notes that those debts will be manageable only if Latin American economies expand rapidly and steadily.

The Latin countries are getting a great deal of uneasy attention, but Mr. Clausen observed that they are far from the least fortunate cases. He spoke of sub-Saharan Africa, the only large region in the world where incomes per capita have actually fallen during the past decade.

It is quite true that many of the African countries got entangled with policies of subsidy and regulation that have depressed their growth. Those policies have sometimes been cited in the United States as good reasons for cutting back aid to poor countries or, for that matter, support for the World Bank. But it is worth noting that the bank itself has been the most effective of the foreign critics of those self-defeating policies, and that with its encouragement many of the African countries in the past couple of years have begun to move in more promising directions. Meanwhile, the world's rich nations are debating whether to reduce their contributions to the International Development Association, the World Bank affiliate that provides lowinterest loans to the most desperately poor of nations. The richest of all the world's countries, the United States, is doggedly holding out for the lowest possible compromise on grounds that it cannot afford more.

How effective is aid to the very poor? Mr. Clausen points out that since the IDA went into business more than two decades ago, 27 of the nations to which it made loans have risen in economic strength to a point at which they are oo longer eligible for them. Some are well up in the middle-income class of countries and have themselves become IDA contributors.

Keep the United Nations

Keynes Has Returned

Americans are periodically reminded by their politicians that a bunch of foreigners are on the loose in New York. Daring to call themselves the United Nations, these strangers insult American hospitality by refusing to think like Americans. So Mayor Koch calls the UN a "cesspool," and Idaho's Senator Steven Syms thunders, "Taxpayers are sick and tired of playing host to our enemies and critics."

On that note, the Senate voted 66-23 to withhold a fourth of America's annual dues of $363 million and to reduce the payment to $200 million over four years. If the House were to concur, the United States could lose its General Assembly vote once it fell two years behind. If it defaults, that might inspire efforts to transfer the UN to Geneva or Vienna. So what? Why not bid adieu to what Mr.

Koch calls a "monument to hypocrisy"? In the first place, a great many nations send their ablest spokesmen to the General Assembly. Does anyone sanely believe that the United States and New York are the worse for that? And what is wrong with exposing the world's diplomats to the pluralism and, yes, the dissonance that sets America apart?

There are deeper reasons. Mr. Reagan stated one to the scorned General Assembly: "The International finance is a more amusing subject than you might think. For connoisseurs, one of the better moments of the annual International Monetary Fund meetings was in a preparatory session a few days ago. The subject was the huge American budget deficit

the Treasury, Donald T. Regan, was defending the size of the deficit with the argument that rebuttal came from Jacques Delors, the fi-violence and can act as an enormous force for peace and prosperity." There is no other forum for addressing the turbulence of an imperfect globe. The UN Charter, which Americans crucially shaped, is no more invalidated by unpunished violations than is the criminal code by unpunished murders. Only those who ignore history would join in the intemperate piety against the United Nations. It was brought to New York by a generation that well understood the appalling consequences of American isolationism, always justified by the "evil" and "hypocrisy" of the rest of the world. To send the United Nations packing for those reasons would be to yield to the escapism that always lurks just beneath the surface of American diplomacy.

Mr. Reagan carelessly encouraged this dark strain in the Senate when he concurred in a foolish outburst by one of his UN delegates. He needs now to remind Congress of his better second thoughts. It was the Soviet Union that began the practice of withholding funds from the UN, to protest some peacekeeping operations. The Senate and even Ed Koch, we suspect, were righteonsly indignant.

Keynes had skewed the ecooomy away from WASHINGTON — It is widely believed in the United States that words matter little in Marxist-Leninist societies, since communist discourse often employs the most vituperative language, especially to-ward capitalist nations. But that is misconception. Language is inordinately important in communist states, where dogma and doctrine often represent the sole legitimizing claim for the control of power. From a Soviet perspective, it is by no means surprising that Yuri Andropov has replied in vindictive terms to the scathing language that has been directed at the Kreanlin by President Reagan since the tragic Soviet destruction of the South Korean airliner with 269 persons aboard. When Talk: Horia Rob Undercuts Arms Talks

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON — The Reagan policy for dealing with the Soviet Union — bristling words and an all-out arms race — is flourishing as never before. The administration has succeeded in using the Korean airliner incident to intensify anti-Soviet thetoric and win congressional approval of an array of new weapons.

But a funny thing has happened. At the moment of its fullest application, the policy has proved bankrupt. Administration officials, realizing the dangers, are alarmed. Even Ronald Reagan may have an inkling.

The event that put a chill on Washington was the statement by Yuri Andropov on relations with America. Putting his personal imprimatur on the position, the Soviet leader paint-ed the administration's policy as unremittingly hostile and implied that there was no point in trying to do business with such a government. Any "illusions" of "a possible evolu-tion for the better" in its policy, he said, had been "finally dispelled."

The statement caused concern for evident reasons. It is one thing to give sermons about the evil of the Soviet system. It is quite another to wake up and realize that the leaders of the other superpower no longer think it worth talking to you about matters engaging the fate of mankind.

If meaningful communication breaks down, the consequences could be immediate and severe on the ques; tion of medium-range missiles in Europe. The United States is to begin flying Pershing-2 missiles to West. Germany in about six weeks. Many Europeans have been hoping for last-minute progress in Soviet-U.S. arms talks that would forestall the deployment. But the Andropov statement turns that possibility from remote to just about oonexistent.

Once the deployment of Pershings and cruise missiles begins, the Rus-sians may take some threatening action in response. They might deploy missiles in East Germany, or move nuclear-armed submarines closer tothe American East Coast. It takes no great imagination to see how such steps could heighten the present mood of confrontation and increase the risk of fatal misadventure.

A perception of such danger seems suddenly to have struck the Reagan administration. Secretary of State George Shultz has reportedly told colleagues that the strident and prolonged criticism of the Soviets over the downing of the airliner may have had unintended consequences.

But only someone grossly unin-formed about the Soviet Union could have failed to appreciate how the Russians might react to the words used by this administration — and not just since the incident. For two and a half years Mr. Reagan has directed the harshest language at Sovict leaders, really denying their le-gitimacy. And they do care, morbidly, about attacks of that kind.

The bithe ignorance of the administration in its use of rhetoric has been matched in its notion of frightening the Soviet Union into submisveness by an arms race. The Russizns have matched every previous weapons buildup, or exceeded it, and there is no reason to think that this arms race will end differently.

Dealing with the Soviet Union is enormously difficult and frustrating.

Its system is cruel, its reactions verging sometimes on the paranoid.

But what is the alternative to negotiation? Can anyone really believe that keeping its foreign minister out of New York will impress the Soviet Union? Other proposals advanced by the American right are equally irrelevant. Insult, bluster and threat do not work. No, there is no alternative tothe hard work of talking — and try-ing to define the common interest, theirs and ours, in survival.

That is the point of a remarkable article by George Kennan in the current issue of The New Yorker. The piece is a cri de coeur from a man who has devoted his life to the problem of. dealing with the Soviets.

For all its conspiratorial nature, Mr. Kennan says, the Soviet regime. has a deep interest in avoiding war. But the Reagan administration acts as if that reality did not exist, as if the Russians were 10 feet tall, as if they had no problems, as if they could be stopped from world conquest only by military force. Then he writes:

"This view is, if one will forgive my language, simply childish inexcus-ably childish, unworthy of people charged with the responsibility of conducting the affairs of a great power in an endangered world."

It is a more dangerous world today.

than when Mr. Reagan took office in 1981. Ordinary communication with Moscow has virtually ceased. U.S. leaders talk about the relationship more and more in military terms—compelling the ordinary citizen, as Mr. Kennan says, "to conclude that some sort of military showdown is the only conceivable denouement," The New York Times.

N EW YORK—In recent days I have attended meetings of Commonwealth finance ministers as well as the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, where we have addressed major questions involving the world financial and banking system. I believe that the Reagan administration and the U.S. Congress are treading a dangerous path in failing to face up to the imminent threat of disaster that hangs over the world economy. For a number of years I have warned of the of the structural arisen from excessive lending by the private banking system to so many middle- and low-income countries during the 1970s. We should have been warned several years ago when the rescheduling of Turkey's external debt proved to be a more complex and difficult task than the simple exercise that was expected. Poland produced the first major crisis, but this was very largely a problem for West German banks. It was Mexico that first exposed the time bomb that had been built for the American banking system - not just the major internabankers but all those smaller regional banks that had contributed to the international issues that the big fellows had organized.

I am not being alarmist. These views are shared by leaders and finance ministers of the overwhelming majority of the nations of the world, who have promoted resolution after resolution in international forums during the past year or so, only to find that whatever veto may be available is applied by the representatives of the United States and some of the affluent industrial countries of Europe.

Surely it is much easier to recognize an interdependent world and bring the world community together in a oew Bretton Woods-type conference to consider feasible proposals that have already been widely discussed — for example, greater symmetry in balance-of-payments adinstruent, wider use of special drawing rights and to move gradually over the medium and long term toward a solution of the structural probicms that are with us whether we like it or not. New Zealand and America have been friends

Under Article 125 of the Polish penal code they face sentences of between five years' hard labor and death. There is something overwhelmingly depressing about the prospect of KOR leaders facing such brutal charges when they are so isolated and so vulnerable. KOR was never a mass movement of work-

Such an analysis is an insult both to the 10 million Poles who signed up with Solidarity and to the few dozen intellectuals who made up KOR. It is an attempt to play the game of splitting those who earn a living by thinking from those who earn by using their hands.

1908: Settlement in Rhodesia

ADEN - It is likely that in the near future the British South Africa Company will be making favorable proposals to induce settlers to take up property in Rhodesia. This company decided to send out Robert Wallace, professor of agriculture and rural economy at Edinburgh University, to make a thorough investigation and report. "In my opinion," Prof. Wallace said, "the future prosperity of the country lies in stock raising. I propose that a scheme should be initiated whereby selected plots of land, covering six thousand acres, should be disposed of. A portion of this land should be presented free to settlers, and the balance of the land paid for at a fixed rate, after which the property would helong to the settler."

DARIS - Today is the 25th anni- By William G. Andrews

French Republic. On Oct. 4, 1958.
Michel Debré, who was garde des sceaux in the de Gaulle government and principal author of the new constitution, affixed the seal of the state to the official leather-bound, parchment original, thereby promulgating it. In a brief ceremony he expressed the wish that it "have a long life and great success." Few impartial observers expected that to happen.

Yet today, at the Paris city hall, Mr. Debré gives the keynote speech at a silver anniversary celebration for a regime that has survived longer than any but the absolute monarchy and the Third Republic (1875-1940), neither of which had a real constitution. Nor did the Third Republic

versary of the birth of the Fifth have the broad popular support that has sustained the Fifth Republic. The reasons for the intitial skepticism are clear. The constitution was produced in a crisis atmosphere and seemed tailor-made for Charles de Gaulle's heroic figure. When the Algerian war ended, it was thought, the old party leaders would drive him from office, as they had in 1946, and abandon his constitution.

That nearly happened in 1962. The Algerian war did end. The party lead-ers did overturn de Gaulle's government. But, instead of quitting, he gave his regime new life and strength by enacting through popular referen-dum a constitutional amendment for direct election of the president.

Since then the regime has survived de Gaulle's resignation in 1969, the death of his Gaullist successor, Georges Pompidou, in 1974 and the victory of its early opponents in 1981. The left in power has made no move to amend the constitution and seems unlikely to do so. It governs France with oo appreciable differ- product. The only significant politience, constitutionally speaking, from its conservative predecessors.

Neither the 1981 election of a Socialist president, at a time when a conservative National Assembly had two years of its term remaining, nor the current debate on whether a president of one persuasion can "cohabit" with an assembly of another has affected the solidity of the regime. The explanation for that remarkable survival is complex. For one thing, the original friends of the con-stitution presided over its fate for the first 22 years. It had time to take root. Also, sweeping changes in society after World War II had created a more hospitable environment. By 1958, France had become more prosperous, more cohesive, less contentious and therefore more receptive to execurive leadership.

A third factor was the elaborate drafting process that produced the constitution. Contrary to popular myth, the text was not a Gaullist closet document. Every significant political current except the Communists was represented at almost every stage. The final text incorporated important suggestions from all of them. The result was a seasoned and balanced design. Some of its provisions derived from the substantial constitutional reform efforts of the Fourth Republic. Others sanctioned estabshed practices that had been unconstitutional or extra-constitutional in the previous regime but had developed from practical need. Even the more original aspects had been discussed in public for many years.

The success of that process was evident immediately. Every partici-

were the Communists, a breakaway Socialist left wing and a small center left party led by François Mitterrand. Nearly 80 percent of the voters — including at least a million Communist supporters — approved the con-stitution by popular referendum.

Mr. Mitterrand's initial opposition was based on his refusal to the military coup d'état." Later he became a trenchant critic of the excessive executive power he said the text conferred. When the presidency came within his grasp, his attitude changed again. The institutions of the Fifth Republic, he has said, "were oot made for me, but they fit me well." By the time Mr. Mitterrand was elected president, those institutions were entrenched too solidly and were too popular to be replaced or even altered significantly. Italy Questions Justice Of Maintaining Statutes Used Against Terrorists

By Henry Kamm

ROME - The "Bulgarian conoection," the allegation that Bularian secret services masterminded a Turkish gunman's attempt on the life of Pope John Paul II in 1980, grew more tenuous last week. The situation raised new questions about whether tough Italian laws used to combat terrorism can be instified after the terrorists apparently have been smashed.

The investigating magistrate who 10 months ago ordered the arrest of a Bulgarian Airline official here because of charges by the gimman, Mehmet Ali Agca, report-edly notified Mr. Agca that slander charges would be brought against him for false accusations. Sergei 1. Antonov, the accused airline manager, remains in prison, presum-ably because the magistrate, Ilario Martella, is still investigating other accusations by Mr. Agea, who is oow serving a life sentence.

The developments are fueling a debate in Parliament and the press about the most significant carryover of "the years of lead," the years in which terrorist groups kept much of Italy in a virtual state of siege. At issue are the exceptional laws and administrative measures that gave police and the courts sweeping powers to act against ter-

> Since the parliamentary elections of last June, talk has centered on the case of a particularly prominent suspect, Antonio Negri, a 50year-old political science professor from Padua University and a theoretician of left-wing radicalism. Mr. Negri was arrested in 1979 on suspicion of having been involved in the Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of former Prime Minis-pleaded not guilty. During the June parliamentary election campaign, the small mav-erick Radical Party put Mr. Negri high on its list of candidates. It appeared that the subsequently victorious candidate might go to Parliament instead of prison.

Long Skirts Emerge at Milan Showings

ILAN - Skirts have dropped M drastically in Milan, which is more a change of mood than of proportions. Elegance is the name of the game, and in the words of Gianfrance Ferre, who opened the Milan collections Monday: Sportswear need not be sloppy."

It is also as if the Milan designers, who all create several collections, some under their own names. others anonymous, wanted to make their runway collections a special effort, a prestige show on a different and loftier plateau.

This obsession with the runway can be good and it can be bad. In the case of Ferre, usually a purist, it resulted in gaudy sequined dresses at the end, which were obviously there more for show than for sale. But buyers who have seen the whole collection pronounced them-

With feather-light tailored jackets of long floating coats, these had the languid elegance of leasured life at old-fashioned spas. The long look was also successfully carried out with sarong-draped suede skirts with double-tiered silk shirts and particularly pretty in hot color

Another variant was the pristine white linen dresses, with some twopiece outfits snugly fitted over the derriere by stiff hip cinchers. Ferre otherwise showed a strong-shoul-dered, long-torsood and lean look with constant focus on the hips. His double- and triple-layered silk shirts, caught in artful drapes, rang a luxurious note, as did many monotone and very pale outfits, such as a pearl-gray pantsuit that opened the collection.

There is a softness about Ferre which becomes outright sexy, espe-cially when his black satin camisole shifts are cut so skinny even skinny models have nothing more to hide But this, for Ferre, is going a bitfar, because he made his mark with strongly sculptured clothes, which came out of his early days as an A swift, spectacular fashion suc-

8th Birthday of Ginnie Mae Futures Is Not a Happy One for Many Traders

EW YORK — Next Friday will mark the eighth anniversary of Gipnie Mae futures, a date that many hedgers and traders would like to forget. The main reason: This pioneer financial contract encouraged sive deliveries of the underlying instruments at prices disadvantaseous to the buyer.

Another reason is that even experienced bankers and others who use the Government National Mortgage Association pass-through certifi-cates did not fully understand them, and this was reflected in their

N.Y. Stocks Decline on Rate Fears

NEW YORK - Prices on the New York Stock Exchange eased Monday as a late rally attempt fell short. It was the fifth consecutive session in which the market lost ground amid investor uncertainty about interest rates and Federal Early selling was sparked by the Federal Reserve's money-supply report late Friday that showed a larger-than-expected $2.3-billion increase. Also, federal funds rates, which banks charge one another, traded at 9% percent, which some investors thought was too high.

"The market is looking for a sigial from the Federal Reserve that it is going to ease credit and the Fed hasn't given any notices," said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp.

He said traders have been expecting easier credit since the money-supply growth has declined sub-stantially the past couple of months and the economic recovery has slowed to a more sustainable pace.

National Steel Assumes New Name And New Approach to Profitability

By Steven Greenhouse New York Times Service

NEW YORK -- National Steel Corp. of Pittsburgh, after one of the worst years in its own and the industry's history, may well be the only major U.S. steel company to report an operating profit in

Not only that; National Steel in August booked enough orders to run at 100 percent of capacity, while the rest of the industry was limping along at

In addition, the company has changed radically in the last three years. It has sold its largest steel mill, taken over the nation's eighth-largest savings and loan association, sharply expanded its alumi num-production capacity and begun to look for new markets for its coal division.

With all these changes, it is not too surprising that the company decided to change its name, too. Thus, this month the company adopted the name of its new holding company — National Intergroup - with National Steel remaining the name of the steel division.

The market has rallied around these changes with National's stock jumping from a low of $13.875 earlier this year to $30.50 Friday. Yet skepticism remains. Some analysts, for example, predict that the company's crucial sales of sheet steel to the automobile industry will be hurt by competition from Inland Steel and Bethlehem Steel. Both companies are installing continuous annealing processes, which produce higher-quality tempered steel.

And despite the recent stock market performance, one analyst said: "I'm telling investors that National is a ocutral investment. It's a steel company that is clearly coming back, but others that have a way to go yet might prove better invest-

Hong Kong Markets Slump As Financial Jitters Grow

munity here, economic analysts

The local currency slumped to a day's low of 8.75 to the U.S. dollar in late trading from an early 8.20. Share prices fell across the board, with the Hang Seng index down more than 43 points to a 1983 low

lowed a series of raids on Carrian The analysts said the stock market fell partly because of the arrests relating to the making of false and misleading statements. They brought an additional charge of false accounting against Mr. Ho. Carrian is deeply in debt after the collapse of the British colony's property market. The arrests fol-

Police later charged the two un-

Slide in the Spot Market Price of Oil Raises Fears for Quarter, Weekly Says Up 6-61/2%

NICOSIA (AP) — The slide in the spot market price of oil last week has raised fears about the stability of the oil market in the fourth quarter, the weekly Middle East Economic Survey reported Monday. Though the slide had by no means attained runaway proportions, it has inflation-adjusted, gross national revertheless been sufficiently marked to raise fears," the publication product of the United States is said. It added that factors currently tending to lower prices included:

• The rise of production by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries above the agreed ceiling of 17.5 million barrels a day. It said the estimated third-quarter OPEC daily output is about 18.3 million barrels. There has been an increase of 200,000-300,000 barrels a day in North Sea output over the past few months, it added.

Refiners and traders had made arrangements for September-October oil production that turned out to be substantially in excess of actual requirements and they were now channeling that oil onto the spot market. This situation has been exacerbated by the September maintenance shutdown of several major refineries.

Boeing Gets $727-Million MX Pacts

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - Boeing Co. was awarded a total of $726.9 million in four contracts by the Air Force for the MX missile program, the Defense Department said Monday.

The department said a $694-million contract will be used for production of MX missiles, $16.5 million for aircraft-wing modification, $9.6 million for E-4 aircraft logistics and $6.8-million for Minuteman missile

STC Says 2 Top Executives to Resign STOCKHOLM (AP) — Citing "acute problems," STC Scandinavian Trading AB, an an energy group in which Volvo holds a 55 percent interest, said Monday that its two top executives would resign.

STC also said Volvo would provide an infusion of $51.2 million through a loan and a purchase of preferred stock. STC has suffered cilitading losses and losses by its Scandrill oil and gas subsidiary, active mainly in the United States.

STC said that in connection with the company's problems, Anders Wall was resigning as chairman and Tedde Jeansson as president. STC said that Ulf Linden, executive vice president of Volvo, would replace Mr. Wall as chairman but it did not name a successor for Mr. Jeansson.

Creusot to Sell 20% Framatome Stake

PARIS (AP) — The French Atomic Energy Commission will increase its stake in France's only nuclear-reactor-construction company, Framatome et Cie., from 30 to 50 percent as part of a recovery package for the financially troubled Creusot-Loire group, the company announced Mon-

Creusot-Loire did not say how much it would derive from the sale of 20 percent of Framatoine, but industry observers have estimated that it would bring in 400 million to 500 million francs (about $50 million-$62.5 million) of badly needed liquidity.

Creusot-Loire, a subsidiary of the Empain-Schneider group, is one of the few big industrial companies to remain in private hands after the Socialists nationalized major industrial groups after taking power in 1981, but it has been crippled by losses in steelmaking.

U.S. Steel May File Dumping Suits

VIENNA (Reuters) - U.S. Steel is considering filing dumping or countervailing duty suits with the U.S. Commerce Department before the end of this year against South Korea, Mexico, Argentina, Spain and possibly Venezuela, the company's chairman, David Roderick, said

At the annual meeting of the International Iron and Steel Institute, he said U.S. Steel will file a new dumping suit against Brazil before Nov. 1, and had already filed a countervailing duty suit against Brazil.

Mr. Roderick said the company and the United Steelworkers of America, are considering sponsoring legislation that would impose import quotas on certain Third World steel producers.

Chrysler, Lotus Discuss Joint Venture

DETROIT (Renters) — Chrysler Corp. has been having "brainstorming sessions" with Lotus Cars of Britain about a possible joint venture, according to the trade paper Automotive News.

A Chrysler vice president confirmed that discussions had taken place concerning "one small project," possibly a sports car, but be labeled them "on the backburner." He said Chrysler has talked to a number of other companies, including Ford and Volkswagen, about joint ventures.

The paper said the talks advanced last week when Michael Kimberley, the managing director of Lotus, visited the United States. Lotus already has an agreement to produce 5,000 cars annually for Toyota, using many of the Japanese automaker's components.

Supreme Court Lets Stand Ruling Allowing Video-Game Copyrighting

By Elizabeth Olson

WASHINGTON - The Sppreme Court let stand on Monday a decision allowing Pac-Man and other video games to be copyright-ed. The decision will allow manu-facturing companies to maintain sole rights to the lucrative games.

The justices refused to hear arguments by a company that sells games similar to Pac-Man as well as special circuit boards to speed up the action of video games. The company, Artic International Inc. of New Jersey, argued that the manufacturer of Pac-Man enjoyed copyright privileges that amounted to a monopoly.

FOOLS OF FORTUNE

By William Trevor. 239 pp. $13.95. Viking, 40 West 23d St., New York, N.Y. 10010.

Reviewed by Michiko Kakutani

I N William Trevor's lucid new novel, "Fools of Fortune," the young Willie Quinton sees the future unfurling before him with the bright clarity of youth: he will take over his father's mill, marry his pretty cousin, Marianne, and one day they will live together at the family homestead of Kilneagh in County Cork — just as their ancestors have done for centuries past. This vision of what might have been, how will fall victim to the violence of the Irish troubles. Their dreams violated, the Quintons will discover that their inheritance is one of pain, as well as beauty.

Writing in spare, lilting prose, Trevor delineates these melodramatic events with economy and precision. Though the design of "Fools of Fortune" is ambitious and almost parablelike in form, it rarely feels strained; and the reverperations of the Anglo-Irish conflict are drawn in such highly personal terms that their signifi-cance seems moral, rather than political. As in most of Trevor's work, there are some wonderfully comic scenes - the ones set in an Irish boarding school are especially funny - but the clever, brittle irony that dominated the early fiction has been assimilated into a wiser, more compassionate voice, capable of lyricism and

Many of Trevor's short stories, as well as such novels as "Other People's Worlds" and "The Children of Dynmouth," are concerned with placid, ordinary lives, abruptly cracked open by noisy, disruptive events; and the first portion of "Fools of Fortune" is devoted to establishing the lovely, everyday world inhabited by Willie and his family—a world that will seem all the more idyllic and precious in the wake of future events. Setting down his observations in fine, chaste prose that recalls. the work of the early Joyce, Trevor draws this world with such authority that the reader begins to participate in the daily rhythms of the village and the banal problems of its inhabit-

When we first see Willie, the book's principal narrator, it is 1918, and he is 8 years old, "a straw-haired boy with the family's blue eyes and a face that caused strangers to inquire if I were delicate." Willie's days are defined by school and homework, rambles through the rhododendron garden with his family's dogs, and visits to his father's office. His biggest fear comes from the prospect of being sent away to school

For Willie, history is still something to be learned from textbooks — his teachers tell him about Queen Maeve, Daniel O'Connell, and the other "men and women who had enlivened the story of our rebellious island" - and he sees a kind of glamour in the grown-ups' talk of gmmen and British soldiers. "Nothing," Wilhe thinks, "could surely have been more exciting than revolutionaries on the lawns and in the shrubbery." Willie's Anglo-Irish parents, Protestant advocates of home rule, support the revolutionary cause. When a British informer, employed in Quinton's mill, is found murdered — his tongue cut out, his body swinging from a tree — the British troops take their revenge. Late one night, as the Quintons he sleeping, the soldiers set fire to the house, killing Willie's fother and tree soldiers. father and two sisters. Willie's memories of that terrible night — lying on the wet grass, in pain, watching his home crumple in the smeke and flames - mitiate him into the unly realities of history.

Like Julia, in "Other People's Worlds", who longs to return to the pristine, inviolate world she inhabited before making a terrible marriage — Willie hopes to recapture the inno-cence of the past; and, for a time, he seems resilient enough to succeed. He leaves for boarding school, where he becomes buddles with an aspiring actor and the son of a lemon-ade tyeoon, and finds solace in their shared rituals of adolescence. The boys make fun of their professors — a math teacher nicknamed Mad Mack and a headmaster known as Scro-tum—and they trade sexual jokes and stories. After graduation, Willie goes to work in his father's mill, and he realizes that he has fallen in love with his English cousin.

Willie's mother, however, has become a casualty of the troubles: she drinks too much, tends to her family too little, and becomes obsessed about avenging her husband's death. One day, Willie comes home to find her dead, her wrists slit with a razor; and after that, he realizes, "all is changed, changed utterly." His own act of vengeance turns him into an exile; and while he and Marianne discover that their love can indeed survive, their daughter, Imelda -a crazy innocent with visionary skills -will inherit the damages of their lives.

It is Trevor's achievement that he compresses these 60 years of history into a dense and supple narrative; and, in so doing, makes us feel both the gathering disorder in the Quintons' lives and its sad, ineradicable meaning for generations to come.

dicates a trade may be made. Pelle Lindbergh d Bob Froese provide more than adequate young a team as advertised, with Chico Resch and Ron Low in goal, Boh Lorimer, Phil Russell, Mike Kitchen on defense and Mel Bridg-Minnesota—Still a galaxy of would-be stars. man, Bob MacMillan and Don Lever up front. But the young players do have talent — Aaron Broten, Jeff Larmer, Breut Ashton and Paul Gague proved it last season, while Pat Verbeek and Rick Chernomaz should do it this year.

Pittsburgh - New Coach Lon Angotti is giving five or six newcomers a chance, but will have to rely beavily on his few talented veterans Doug Shedden, Rick Kehoe and Mike Bullard up front, Randy Carlyle on defense and goalies Denis Herron and Michel Dion.

Adams Division

Boston - Backed by Pete Peeters in goal, relative youngsters helped give the Bruins the league's best record last season. Included are three centers — Barry Pederson (sixth in league scoring with 107 points at age 22), Tom Fergus (21) and Steve Kasper (22) — plus Keith Crowder (24), Mike Krushelnyski (23) and Luc Dufour (19). The defense is less deep; Peeters's goaltending is key.

Buffalo — Mike Ramsey (age 22), Phil Housely (19) and Hannu Virta (20) are the young core of a solid defense. The depth in goal is good, with Bob Sarve, Jacques Cloutier and 18year-old American draftee Tom Barasso. Real any goalie fits.

Cloutier, the right wing acquired from Quebec, joins a group of capable forwards.

Montreal — Expect some player moves. Help is needed on defense, where Larry Robinson carries too much of the load, Ric Nattress is suspended following a drug conviction and Rick Green is out two months with a broken wrist. Young centers Alfie Turcotte and John Chabot make Dong Wickenheiser logical trade bait. Ouebec - With the three Stastny brothers attacking the Nordiques will never lack scoring power. Some offense was lost in the Cloutier trade, but obtaining Tony McKegney, Andre Savard and J.F. Sauve adds depth. The defense lineup that produced the league's fourth-best record last season. The goaltending is solid:

Tony Esposito was 23-11-5 last year and Mur
George Magnire seems unable to make useful ray Bannerman was 24-12-5. An explosive of- trades. Both criticize their players publicly. No

Look at the centers alone: Bobby Smith, Neal Broten and Dennis Maruk, all potential 30-goal scorers, are joined by Brian Lawton, the league's top draft choice. With wings like Dino Ciccarelli (37 goals), Brian Bellows (35) and Steve Payne (30), scoring is no problem. Defense might be.

Toronto — The Leafs had a strong second half last season. Now their young defensemen
—Jim Benning (age 20), Fred Boimistruck, Bob McGill and Craig Muni (all 21) —have another year's experience, plus Borje Salming to lead them. Much depends on the consistency of goalie Mike Palmateer. St. Louis — The question is how much the offseason trauma — the club's being nearly sold to Saskatchewan, then folding, then getting revived by a new owner - will affect the players. There's a new general manager, Ron Caron, and new coach, Jacques Demers, but only one new player, Guy Chouinard.

Detroit — Only at scason's end can a verdict be given on Jim Devellano's big trade, acquiring Ron Duguay, Eddie Johnstone and Ed Mio from the Rangers for Willie Huber, Mark Os-borne and Mike Blaisdell. The Wings are counting beavily on Mio, but this defense would give Smythe Division

Edmonton - Not much new here, but there's not much need to tinker with a team that scored 74 more goals than any other last season, fin-ished third in the overall standings and went to the cup finals. The one change: Grant Fuhr has replaced Andy Moog as the No. I goalie.

Winnipeg — The Jets have two hulking draft choices on defense, Bob Dollas (6-2, 210) and Jim Kyte (6-5, 220), as well as their No. 1 draft choice, right wing Andrew McBain. The decent but not deep offense is led by Dale Hawerchuk, Brian Mullen, Thomas Steen and Lucien DeB-Calgary — Traded away are Guy Chouinard, Mel Bridgman, Phil Russell, Kevin Lavalee, Carl Mokoksak and Steve Christoff. Newcom-

New Jersey - The Devils are not quite as fense is led by Denis Savard (120 points), Al wonder the Kings are going nowhere.

Till Divorce Do Us Part

WASHINGTON — The pre-nuptial contract is getting more and more prevalent, as the divorce rate rises in the country.

I was the best man at a prenuptial legal contract ceremony the other day. The groom to be, Horace Pipeline, was attended by the famed divorce lawyer Roy Bone, and the bride-to-be, the lovely Grace Willowy, was being given away by Stephanie Tuff of the firm Rock, Sock & Needham.

The bride and groom sat in the love seat in Bone's palatial office. which, for the occasion, had been decorated with magnolias and white roses. Bone, reading from a yellow lefrom a yellow legal pad, said. Dearly beloved, we are gathered bere today to bring this man and this woman to-

Buchwald gether in a happy prenuptial contract, spelling out the property claims of both parties in case, for reasons we shall not go into here, this marriage is broken asunder. Do you, Horace Pipeline, agree that, in case you do not choose to continue in wedlock, you will bestow on your lovely bride a lump sum equal to 5 percent of your present assets, excluding your boat, your penthouse, and your house in Southampton?

"Wait a minnte," said Tuff. "Who said anything about a lump sum, and who said anything about excluding Mr. Pipeline's boat, penthouse and home in Southamp-ton? My client, under law, is entitled to 50 percent of all of her husband's property. But we don't want to be greedy about this. We'll settle for $10,000 a month until she gets married again."

"Alimony is ont of the question," Bone said. "I cannot permit my client to enter the sacred institution of matrimony unless he can get out of it by paying off a lump sum at the dissolution of the marriage. How can we be sure when and if Miss Willowy will get married

"How do you feel about it, Grace?" Tuff asked, "I love Horace very much and if

be wants to provide me with a lump sum, I don't have any objection. But I want to know what numbers we're talking about before I say 'I

Bone smiled, "You're a very reasonable young lady. Would $500,000 satisfy you?"

Tuff said, "No, it wouldn't, Roy, and you know before we came here we researched Horace's assets down to the last nickel. Now let's he serious or call off this premuptial legal contract ceremony right

Bone scowled, "As Horace's lawyer I can't go over $500,000, but if he wants to be more generous I'll leave it to him. Horace, what do you think?"

"Grace is the only woman I've ever loved," Horace said. "I can't imagine anything but death parting us. But just in case something did happen. I'm willing to give her a cool million - the same as I gave my second wife."

Tuff said, "Horace's second wife was much older than Grace, and the million be settled on her was before inflation set in. We want one million five and the house in Southampton."

"Out of the question," Bone said angrily. "These people hope to live happily ever after. My client would not have a day of happiness if he knew it would cost him a million five plus the house in Southampton to get out of the marriage."

Tuff said, "How do you think my client would feel if she knew she could be tossed out in the street for a lousy million dollars?"

Grace became upset. "This talk is so sordid it's destroying our love for each other. I'll take a million, two hundred thousand, and the penthouse in New York. But that's the bottom line."

Horace said, "Don't be angry, darling. You're asking for more than I planned to give you, but I want you to he happy. Give it to her, Roy, providing we have it in writing she doesn't go to court and try to sock it to me for anything

"All right, Horace, it's your money. I'll have this typed up while we open a bottle of champagne and drink a toast to the happy couple. Please excuse my tears. Preauptial marriage contract ceremonies always make me cry."

Peter Dawkins

By Rone Tempest Los Angeles Times Service WEST POINT, New York — Why did Pete Dawkins quit

the Army?
In 1959, when he was only 20 years old and a senior at the U.S. Military Academy here, Dawkins was already being compared to General Douglas A. MacArthur. Nobody but MacArthur had built such an outstanding record at this somber gray institution overlook-ing the Hudson River.

Like MacArthur, Peter M.

Dawkins was first captain of the corps of cadets and a "Star Man," a student ranked in the top 5 percent of his class. But Dawkins was also president of his class, widely considered the most distinguished group of cadets at the academy since the famous class of 1915 He was also one of a record six Rhodes scholars selected from the class of 1959.

And as an athlete, Dawkins was nonpareil: captain of the last Army football team to go unde-feated, Ali-American halfback, Heisman Tropby winner, captain of the hockey team.

The famous Army football coach, Earl (Red) Blaik, a man not given to lavish praise, said, "I can practically prophesy that someday Dawkins will be chief of staff."

At an age when many bright young men are happily ignorant of career and fortune, Dawkins's future seemed ordained. But, on May 15, after what he called an "Il-month odyssey" of contem-plation about his future and his life, Brigadier General Dawkins, his star only two years old, told Army Chief of Staff Edward C. Meyer that he planned to retire.

The move shocked Army brass and surprised some of his closest friends and admirers in the service. Dawkins, interviewed later in the backyard of his modest Alexandria, Virginia, home, spoke only in broad terms about his decision.

"This was really a very personal decision. It is doubly difficult because it was choosing between a relatively certain career, profession, future prospect and a very uncertain, unknown alternative, only vaguely sensed and imper-fectly understood myself.

"The terrible tyrant of life," said Dawkins, somewhat of a literary ham, fond of aphorisms and great words, "is that you can't do all of the things that you really, passionately want to do."

But, in his backyard, Dawkins did not seem "tyrannized" by the terrible choices life presents. He seemed to relish them. Leaders of both political parties in at least three states have approached him as a potential candidate for the U.S. Senate. Dawkins said that he had not ruled out politics someday but that going into business for a year or two might be better first.

A group of major league baseball owners seeking a new com-missioner approached him, but be said he was not interested "as the job currently exists."

Then, in mid-September, it was announced that Dawkins would join Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc., one of Wall Street's biggest securities firms, as head of its public finance group. [In a telephone interview with the International Herald Tribone before he assumed his new post at the beginning of this month, Dawkins said he "did not begin with the preconceived notion that I was becoming an investment banker. . . . I had a bit of an old fashioned notion that so long as I was a public official I should devote my energies to do that job the best I could and not devote time to developing the next one. ["The whole nature of what many testing and disappointing moments during his career. Perhaps the most telling oc-curred in 1973, when Dawkins was named a White House fellow, a one-year appointment that allows officers to serve in the civilian side of the government at White House discretion. Dawkins, two of his closest friends said, was intent on working in some area not directly related to the military. But Alexander M. Haig Jr., then working in the Nixon White House, insisted that Dawkins he assigned to the Defense Department.

"Haig insisted," one of the friends said. "And; when Pete objected, Haig told him either go to Defense or forget being a White House fellow." Dawkins's dissertation at Princeton University is another example of his dissatisfaction with some phases of Army life. The unpublished dissertation, "The Other War in Vietnam: A Study of Complexity in Implementing Organizational Change," was critical of Army promotion practices." The national attention also caused him problems. Every new assignment brought a new commanding officer, ready to see if he was as good as his press clippings. Dawkins' life was like that of a fictional sports hero in one of those series of novels aimed at pre-teen-age readers. "Pete Dawkins at Royal Oak High," "Pete Dawkins at West Point," "Pete Dawkins Goes to England," "Pete Dawkins Goes to War." In 1968, when Major Dawkins enrolled at Princeton for graduate study, the local newspaper welcomed him with a full-page story headlined: "Future Chief of Staff to Attend Princeton."

Twelve years later, he became the youngest brigadier general in the Army. But on Aug. 1, 24 years after he was sworn into the Army, Pete Dawkins left."

Dawkins, 45, still fit and trim, looking like he could still play halfback for a professional football team, turned to the writings of Buckminster Fuller for an appropriate quotation:

According to friends who new experiment, he always learns talked with him while be was more. Today I begin a new exmaking a decision, there were periment."

"You ruined me," Kissinger chided Zhang, "I got my picture taken with the Soviet ambassador, smiling at each other." Jimmie Fidler, whose radio shows and syndicated columns gave him an audience of more than 50 million Americans in the 1930s and '40s, is retiring because he says Hollywood's glamour days are over. Fidler, 85, one of radio's first gossip columnists, who is still heard on more than 165 U.S. stations, said he will end his 51-year radio career next month "because it's just not fun anymore," he told Show-time's Bill Harris. "I'm reporting on people I don't even know or care about. Today, they don't glamorize the stars — they undress them. I can't name a dozen stars I enjoy talking about these days." At the height of his popularity, Fidler's show was heard on 486 radio stations and he made $4,000 a week. Fidler lives with his wife of 21 years, Kay, in Westlake Village, near Los Angeles. He plans to devote time to writing a book about the stars he knew.

Art lover Maureen Gledhill was thrilled with the colorful abstract painting she bought for the equivalent of $100 — until she discovered if had been painted by a duck. Gledhill, 28, spotted the picture at her local pet shop, owned and run by a sculptor, Ernie Cleverley. When Gledhill, of Liverpool, walked into the shop, Cleverley was discussing the painting with Brian Burgess, an artist, and she thought it was one of his works. "We were over that I began to suspect, "Gled-hill said. "I telephoned Mr. Clever-ley and he admitted that a duck had h France done it. He was quite bold about it but he did not tell me that when I bought it." Gledhill, a wine merchant, now wants her money back.

Cooke asked for respect for "human life in all its forms." The letter, to be read at Masses in the New York archdiocese next Sunday, was read in Italian by a broadcaster on Vatican Radio. The cardinal is being treated at home in New York City. He has rejected aggressive chemotherapy in a hospital because he said it would interfere with the dignity of his life.

The ballet star Alexander Godunov and the ballet company of the Teatro Colon of Buenos Aires canceled the rest of a Latin American tour, complaining they had not been paid. The canceled performances had been scheduled for :-Brazil. Uruguay and Argentina.
The dancers already had given performances in Colombia, Peru and Ecuador. Godunov, former star of Moscow's Bolshoi Ballet who defected to the West in 1979, said in Rio de Janiero that the promoter who arranged the tour, Alex Valdez, a Peruvian, owed him money for 25 performances.
